Three teenage friends on a college rugby team in the shrinking community of English Montréal – three friends each facing wildly different fates. This is the story of Bill Putnam, whose downward trajectory we begin to trace in the late 1970s, and his friends Rudy and Max. Teammates, their paths will cross in ways they never dreamt of in the happier days of their youth.

Colin McGregor is a journalist for Reflét de Société magazine and The Social Eyes web platform, which feature socially aware subjects. A graduate of McGill University in philosophy and Carleton University in public administration, he spent 29 years behind bars. This book was written in prison. Now he works in Montreal's East End to bring together solitudes.

Colin is a career writer and journalist. His expertise with the pen is evident as he describes scenes, places and people from his own youth and amends them to put them into book form. Blending autobiography and fiction, exploring personal themes in a fictitious narrative, this book is therapy for the reader as well as for the author himself. The society he knew in English Quebec is largely gone, swept aside by Québec's major social changes. And yet everyone will be able to relate to what the characters go through in school, as well as in the real world after graduation. A sometimes harsh exploration of real world problems, but not without humor.

Reflét de Société has existed in Québec for 32 years, being the world's first French-language street newspaper. Today widely read in magazine format as well as the web, its publishing arm, Éditions TNT, offers poetry and prose in both English and French. Reading with a social purpose.
